

Batch Management Software Market Research

FIVE-YEAR MARKET ANALYSIS AND TECHNOLOGY FORECAST THROUGH 2023

DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION AND CUSTOMIZATION DRIVE GROWTH

The batch management software market grew again in 2018 and will continue to do so over the forecast period due to a number of economic, technology, and other market conditions. This report provides an in-depth analysis of the worldwide batch management software market, serving as an effective planning guide for current suppliers and new entrants to the market. By providing strategic market information, the report aims to help suppliers develop business plans for marketing and product development in the batch control software area.

In addition to key industries, geographic, and deployment models, the report also includes application subcategories such as recipe management and execution, production scheduling, historian and reporting, batch quality management, and resource and inventory management.

Customization and personalization in specific industries, along with new product introductions, fueled the growth of the batch management software market.

While a niche market, many suppliers made enhancements to their offering because of complementary technology like predictive analytics using edge and cloud platforms and enhanced visualization. Batch management software improves quality, batch-to-batch consistency, and production efficiencies.

The trend towards real-time batch manufacturing requires greater integration between the batch management and enterprise software system. System integrators, engineering firms, and end users using the cloud is enabling collaboration and making deployment faster and easier. The software also makes startups and shut-downs more efficient.
